The foreign trade of the whol country, in the same time, will make a very different exhibit. There is in all seasons a very large balance against us on the foreign trade of this port alone, on account of this being the great receiving depot for foreign productions. Other ports make up in exports usually for most of the excess in imports here; and from returns published a few days since showing the foreign trade of the whole country for the third quarter of the present fiscal year, we should judge that the aggregate exports would exceed in value the aggregate imports for the whole twelve months ending June 30, 1856.

The Pittsburg Price Current gives the following account of the iron trade of the United States:-

count of the iron trade of the United States:—

The United States now makes one seventh of all the iron produced annually in the world. Yet the production in this country is far less than the consumption. In the United States the iron made annually equals righty-four pounds for every person in the country, while the consumption is 117 pounds per head. In England the production is 287 pounds per head, and the consumption 144 pounds. This is one great source of England's wealth. She sells every year many million dollars worth of iron, in all forms, from the pig, the bar, the sheet and the rail, to the finest cutiery, and most minute fabric which iron or stellenters. Last year Great Britain manufactured sellenters. Last year Great Britain manufactured 3,585,905 tons of iron, valued at $125,000,000. About one half that amount, or at least $60,000,000 worth, was for sale to other nations. This product was achieved by the labor of 238 000 men, and 2,120 steam engines, of 242,000 horse pawer. Grea. Britain now produces one-half of all the from male in the world.

There is no trade or manufacture more sure of a steady There is no trade or manufacture more sure of a ste sky and permanent increase and prosperity than that of from Every year that ne'all is applied to new uses, and the demand for it increased. Take the orospective demand for rallroads as an instance. It is estimated by good according that there are 29,000,000 square miles of inhabitable sarface on the globs, which will ultimately require 2,000,000 miles of railroad. Take will require six hunored million tone of rail, beside sixty millions annually for wear and tear. At the present rate of production all the from made in the world for ninety years would only supply the demand alone, aside from all the other uses of from.

In less than ninety years the United States will probable produce a manually search.

only supply the defined since, series to uses of iron.

In less than ninely years the United States will probable produce more from than Great Britain. Our native supplies of the ore are immense and exhaustless, and the constantly increasing demand for from must encourage its manutacture in vast quantities. The iron mines on the shore of Like Superior are more valuable than the gold mines of California. Their extent forbids all fear of exhaustion, and the product will always find an almost
